of the world. They would also insist on the abandonment of brute force and what can only be called by the ugly name of torture for the suppression of a non-violent and peaceful political movement. Where the whole world is turning in disgust from the methods of force to those of conciliation and arbitration, England is going back on the progress of civilization. A few months ago I visited Mrs. Molital Nehru in her magnificent house in Allahabad, and I well remember the impression almost as of awe which this tiny fragile old lady, with her sweet dignity and gracious ways, made upon me. The other day she was beaten by a great lusty policeman as she was leading a peaceful procession through the streets of the city. A few days ago, Jamnalalji's aged mother was turned out of her house at five in the morning. The old mother of a peasant near Lucknow was beaten by the police with the butt-ends of their rifles. Our treatment of Indian women, and even of boys young enough to be called children, have made me ashamed.
